

ENGAGE EDUCATE EMPOWER

Hamama Tul Bushra

Graphic Designer and Illustrator

Trained as a graphic designer in Pakistan, Hamama Tul Bushra finished her Master's in Art History from the University of Missouri Kansas City when she moved to the US.

While furthering her research and pursuing her degree in the doctorate program, Hamama realized that she could not ignore her natural talent and passion for design and reentered the creative world of art. Years of study in the field of art history helped Hamama immensely in understanding the needs of her clients and successfully helping them achieve their goals, whether through designing a logo or rebranding a business. Working as a freelance is both empowering and satisfying for Hamama, as she chooses her own clients with whom she develops a trusting and dependable relationship. Hamama feels fortunate to be a part of the dedicated team members of the Education Series, who are working towards a collective goal for the betterment of students in Kansas and Missouri. She assisted in efforts to accomplish the goal of reaching out to people by creating the marketing material of the campaign, starting with a logo, advertisements for social media, posters, program handouts and banners to count a few. Hamama looks forward to working with all sectors, as a graphic designer and illustrator, to advance social justice for education and women's rights.

